Beginning-of-Year Diagnostic Assessment

GRAMMAR SPY™

Grammar & Writing Diagnostic Assessment for Multilingual Learners

Beginning-of-Year Diagnostic Assessment

Grades 6–12 | ELD Levels 1–4

Teacher Guide

Purpose of This Assessment

Grammar Spy™ is a diagnostic assessment designed to help teachers identify students' current grammar, reading, writing, and speaking proficiency levels. It gives a clear snapshot of what multilingual learners can do at the beginning of the year so you can plan targeted instruction. The assessment is designed specifically for multilingual learners in grades 6–12 at ELD levels 1–4. Use the results to guide small-group instruction, scaffolded support, and flexible grouping. By the end, you'll have a stronger picture of each student's strengths and next instructional steps.

How to Administer

1. Introduce the assessment purpose to students and explain that it will help you understand how to support their learning.
2. Tell students that the assessment is not graded and that their best effort is what matters most.
3. Plan to complete the assessment over 2–3 days so students have enough time to work carefully.
4. Allow students to skip any item they do not know and move on without pressure.
5. Provide a quiet testing environment with minimal interruptions and enough space for students to focus.
6. Read directions aloud for students at ELD levels 1–2 when needed to support access and understanding.
7. Allow dictionaries for the writing section if that support matches your classroom assessment routines.
8. Observe the speaking section individually or in pairs, depending on scheduling and student comfort.

Suggested Timing

Section	Suggested Time
Grammar Diagnostic	25–30 minutes
Reading Diagnostic	15–20 minutes
Writing Diagnostic	20–25 minutes
Speaking Diagnostic	5–7 minutes per student
Total	65–82 minutes

Scoring Recommendations

Use the answer key to score the objective sections quickly and consistently. For writing, use a rubric that looks at ideas, organization, grammar, and vocabulary so you can capture both meaning and language control. Rate speaking on a 1–4 scale to reflect how well students communicate ideas, use language, and respond to prompts. Keep notes on patterns you notice, since those details will help you plan instruction after scoring.

How to Use Results for Grouping

Developing	41-65%	Grammar accuracy, paragraph writing, reading comprehension
Expanding	66-85%	Complex sentences, academic vocabulary, text analysis
Bridging	86-100%	Advanced grammar, essay writing, critical thinking

Reading Passage: A New Beginning

When Sara moved to a new country, everything felt unfamiliar. The streets looked different, the food tasted strange, and the language was difficult to understand. On her first day at school, she held her backpack tightly and walked into the building with a nervous smile. She did not know anyone, and the hallways seemed very large. In class, the teacher spoke clearly and used gestures to help her understand. Sara listened carefully and tried her best to follow along.

At lunch, Sara sat alone for a few minutes. Then another student named Omar noticed her. He asked if she wanted to sit with his friends. Sara nodded and said yes. They talked about music, sports, and favorite foods. Even though Sara made a few mistakes, the students were patient and kind. By the end of the day, she felt a little braver. She realized that change can be hard, but it can also lead to new friendships and new opportunities. Sara decided that tomorrow, she would smile first and speak a little more.

Reading Passage 2: The Science of Sleep

Sleep is essential for teenagers because it supports health, learning, and daily performance. During sleep, the body repairs itself and the brain organizes information from the day. Teenagers need enough sleep because their brains are still developing, and sleep supports memory, attention, and mood. Another important idea is circadian rhythm, the body's natural sleep-wake cycle, which often shifts during adolescence. Because of that shift, many teens feel tired later at night and have a harder time falling asleep early. Regular sleep habits help students stay focused in class and complete tasks more successfully.

One major benefit of sleep is improved cognitive function. When students sleep well, they can think more clearly, solve problems more easily, and remember what they learned. Sleep also supports the immune system, which helps the body fight illness. When teenagers do not get enough rest, they may feel tired, irritable, or distracted during the school day. Over time, poor sleep can affect grades, participation, and emotional health. Sleep also helps the brain process new information and strengthen important connections, which is one reason students often learn better after a good night's rest.

Teenagers can improve their sleep by following healthy routines. They should go to bed at a consistent time, limit screen use before bed, and create a quiet, comfortable sleep environment. Avoiding caffeine late in the day can also make it easier to fall asleep. Good sleep is not just about feeling rested; it is a key part of being ready to learn, grow, and succeed each day.
